

>

Subject: Fwd: Coming Election

Begin forwarded message:

Subject: Fwd: Coming Election

Sent: Friday, February 3, 2012 8:38:51 AM

Subject: Fwd: FW: Coming Election

To:

>

> There are less than 11 months until election day when the people will decide who will be the next President of the United States ...

> The person elected will be the president of all Americans, not just the Democrats or the Republicans. It's that time that we all need to come together, Democrats and Republicans alike.

> In a Bi-Partisan effort for America :

> If you will support the Republican nominee, please drive with your headlights ON during the day.

> If you support Barack Obama, please drive with your headlights OFF at night.

> Together, we can make it happen.

Reminds me of the election flyers that announced a delayed vote day for Democrats, only dumber.

Why is it that Republican humor is demeaning ridicule of all things Democratic or liberal.

I hear a lot of aggression and mean spiritedness. I guess that is why Obama's bipartisan approach was rejected so roundly by the Republican party. When kindness is interpreted as a weakness, and jokes about killing dumb Democrats is just good fun, how Republicans can claim the moral high ground amazes me.

Dale