

Did you notice that all the text on the angry protest signs were in the same style and looked like they were written by the same person? That is no coincidence. Maybe a committee of one formed to make protest signs for the group?

These pictures are of particularly bad quality, but it looks like it could be a photoshop alteration to me. Snopes said the pictures were taken in 06 after the flap about a cartoon depiction of Mohammed in Europe, so I will accept the sad fact that this kind of self righteous religious reactionary hate exists. Even if these pictures are not doctored, the existence of these particular members of islam, should not reflect on the larger group if they have no control over the haters. I deplore hate and violence from any quarter, and passing these pictures around serve no purpose but to feed hate, prejudice, and self righteous aggression. I sure don't want to be judged by what some hot head cracker does just because we share a religion and culture. I don't want to be judged by this chain e-mail, simply because the people who eat this up are white Americans too.

Other Muslims maintained that the protesters were extremists not representative of mainstream British Muslims:

Asgar Bukhari, chairman of the Muslim Public Affairs Committee, said the demonstration in London should have been stopped by police because the group had been advocating violence.

He said the protesters "did not represent British Muslims".

Mr Bukhari told the BBC News website: "The placards and chants were disgraceful and disgusting, Muslims do not feel that way.

"I condemn them without reservation, these people are less representative of Muslims than the BNP are of the British people."

He said that Muslims were angry over satirical cartoons of the Prophet Muhammad published in European papers but it was "outrageous" for anyone to advocate extreme action or violence.

"We believe it [the protest] should have been banned and the march stopped.

<http://www.snopes.com/photos/politics/muslimprotest.asp>

Dale

On Mar 8, 2012, at 1:23 PM, wrote:

Begin forwarded message:

From:

To:
Sent: Wednesday, March 7, 2012 9:24 PM
Subject: [FWD: Shocking pictures from London]

Those of you receiving these pictures in the US of A please see the last paragraph,
and forward them to everyone.

These pictures are of Muslims marching through the STREETS OF LONDON during their recent ' Religion of Peace Demonstration.
<Shocking

Why would anyone think that we should be at war with such nice, peaceful Muslims?!

You need to forward this one to everyone! These pictures tell it all!
Muslims have stated that England will be the first country they take over!

These are pictures not shown on American TV or in American Newspapers, but were forwarded by a Canadian friend who thought all Americans ought to know!